

Kenyan in world's 100 powerful climate change ambassadors

Mithika Mwenda never expected to be named among the world's 100 most influential people in climate change policy this year. Despite being the executive director of Pan African Climate Justice Alliance (PACJA), a civil society organisation that champions a healthy earth, Mwenda never thought he was on same level with some prominent people in the world. So when the announcement by Apolitical, a global network for governments, came last month, Mwenda's name was among the 100 nominated by hundreds of public servants from around the world, including experts at the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), Harvard University, Oxford University, Bloomberg Philanthropies and non-governmental organisations (NGOs). He studied in Moi University where he was a student leader, before joining Jomo Kenyatta University of Agriculture and Technology for post-graduate studies in public policy analysis. <https://www.standardmedia.co.ke/article/2001327047/kenyan-in-world-s-100-powerful-climate-change-ambassadors>