

Student's Work to Stem Malnutrition receives Global Award

Stephen Odiwuor Ochieng, a final year medicine student, has been crowned winner of the 2019 Students Projects for Health Competition. The award by the US based Foundation for Advancement of International Medical Education and Research (FAIMER), is in recognition of Odiwuor's community initiative which seeks to address the burden of malnutrition among children enrolled in early childhood development centers in Kenya. "This award gives much morale to press on with the initiative which aims to make a difference in the lives of vulnerable children in Kenya," Odiwuor said. <http://www.jkuat.ac.ke/students-work-to-stem-malnutrition-receives-global-award/>
